Customer Reviews

The quality of Julia Cook's work has declined steadily since she made it big, and this includes the activities she puts in her activity and idea books. I used maybe 2 things out of this book for a very intensive unit on bullying. I wish I hadn't wasted my money. There are MUCH better resources on Teachers Pay Teachers (many for free!), in other social skills activity books, and online. This book is just a joke. My summer program for 2015 revolved around Julia Cook and her work. I returned nearly all of the new material of hers I've purchased or received since then. She's lost touch with kids, which is incredibly disappointing based on her work experience. Others may still be impressed with her work, but whereas I was once a believer and diehard fan, I now turn up my nose in disgust every time I see a new title on , wondering how bad it'll be, and I'm not willing to take the risk.

The book and accompanying idea book will be great for my guidance lessons with second-grade students! It is very developmentally-appropriate, and it is a quick and easy guide to teaching kids about bullying!

I've used it throughout the school and each of the classes has loved the story and remembered how to get help or help the person bullied. Amazing story and activity book. Recommend it to anyone teaching primary PSD.

I bought this book to accompany the Bully Beans story that I use in my classroom guidance lessons and groups. I was excited to get the activity book thinking I would be able to find a creative activity to use with my lesson. I was pretty disappointed when I looked through the book. Really wasn't impressed with any of the activities and didn't find them very creative. I work with a K-3 population so perhaps it might be better for the older students. Will probably be passing this resource along to someone else or leave it on my book shelf.

Julia Cook is an great author. Her books get to the point in a way that is meaningful for kids. I would not be without them.

Great start to an important discussion with students!!!
