Customer Reviews

During the 2013-14 academic year, I used the 4th edition of Interviewing in Action in a Multicultural World as a companion text for teaching college seniors, pursuing their BSW. Just when I thought things couldn't get any better, this year, I was introduced to the 5th edition of this excellent text book. First things first- I am completely drawn in by what the authors refer to as the "RE-VIEW Practice Method of clinical knowledge and skill development." Murphy and Dillon have created the perfect trifecta- an opportunity to read, watch, and do. Students are encouraged to read a portion of text, watch a short video clip that illustrates the primary principle, and then engage in an exercise that fosters active learning and a concrete chance to apply each skill. This is not your average text book. It includes an activation card, allowing instant access to the "CourseMate" at CengageBrain.com. On the website, each chapter can be explored in a variety of ways--perusing the chapter outline, reviewing a glossary of key terms or using flash cards for studying these terms, self-explorations for experiential learning, essay questions that provoke additional opportunities for reflection, and watching helpful video clips which build sequentially regarding treatment for a variety of clients. There is even an e-book option where the video clips are embedded right into the text. Regarding specific content, the 5th edition offers material that is brand new or expanded and/or reorganized from previous versions. Some of these ideas include how culture affects clinical work, the neuroscience of empathy, reflections on the DSM 5, and the role of technology in the field (e.g. technology-assisted assessment, online counseling, use of EMR systems, confidentiality and the internet, etc.
